

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A light transmission type image recognition device comprises a first transparent substrate having a plurality of transparent pixel electrodes formed in a two-dimensional array on its surface, a second transparent substrate having a transparent faced electrode formed on its surface, and a visual pigment similar protein oriented film layer and a transparent insulating layer which are arranged between both the electrodes.